

Agency adopts Open Access Policy [1]

As a platform for collaboration, the Agency is committed to broad and open information-sharing. The Agency's new Open Access Policy affirms this commitment by expanding the reach and impact of its outputs. The policy clarifies usage and modification rights of Agency resources. Open-access resources are copyrighted but are available on the Agency website for the public to access, download and share. Certain outputs, such as practical tools, are open source. Anyone can modify open-source resources to meet their needs, but Agency approval is necessary to modify other open-access resources. All future Agency project outputs will include the relevant open access disclaimer text and Creative Commons licence. The Creative Commons website contains a section about open access literature, explaining its role in ensuring broad availability of academic research.
